

REMOTE DIRECTING

Keeping your creativity aligned

As the demand for ambitious and technically challenging content intensifies, ensuring your creative and technical partners are aligned on creative vision at every stage of the production is more essential than ever.

In today's production environment, many of the editorial and post team members cannot be physically present on-set. Keeping the director connected to the editor and post supervisor from set is critical to ensure the production workflow is reducing pickup shots an incorporating second unit shots in to the review cycle.

EMPOWERING DIRECTORS TO COLLABORATE REMOTELY, SEAMLESSLY

ClearView Flex is a light touch, remote collaboration product with rock solid video quality available on any device. Offering an easy-to-use, cost-effective solution to the conundrum of how to 'review from anywhere', ClearView recreates the 'over the shoulder' experience of working together on set or in the editing suite.

BE IN TWO PLACES AT ONCE WITHOUT LOSING TIME

When running simultaneous shoots, you can review the second unit's footage when your first unit takes a break in their shooting schedule. That way, you're maintaining consistency between units without interrupting the shoot itself. Even more importantly, you're not risking losing a full day of shooting on your end by waiting for traditional dailies footage to come through at the end of the day.

REMOTE DIRECTION IN ACTION

Award-winning director Chris Strong specialises in live-action, with extensive experience of both location- and studio-based filming. The pandemic forced Strong to switch to directing remotely – something that took some adjusting to, and a lot of communication and planning.

"On set it's far easier to convey to an actor certain subtle nuances you may need to achieve from their performance – getting that across remotely is a challenge, but with ClearView Flex from Sohonet it is made far more achievable. The smoothness and ease of use makes it an ideal production tool for such times when you are unable to attend a grade or shoot in person."
